preeminently qualified for the posi-tion of Surreme Court Judge. He was born in Franklin county, Ten-nessee, and is a son of the Hopkins L. Turney, who represented our State with distinguished ability for six uel Milligan, of years in the United States Senate, commencing in March, 1816. Pete Turney is large in person, and is equally as capacious in heart and intellect. He is a lawyer, enjoying a large practice, and as a citizen he is the very soul of honor, truth and purity. He is the idol of his friends and neighbor, who honor and esteem him. Easy of approach, affable and genial in his manuers, kind in his dis-position, fixed in his friendships and his principles, decided in his opinions and so constituted that when a truth or a measure once receives the full pprobation of his judgement no personal danger, no popular clamor, no considerations of mere policy, can cause him to waver. Col. Thomas J. Freeman, of Brownsville, and Gen. John L. T. Sneed, of Somerville, are the candidates from West Tennessee. Col. Freeman was born in Maury county, whence has come many of the leading men of the State, and is now in his forty-eighth year. Early in life he emigrated to the west and has here grown up with a community that can scarcely date further back than one generation. At the call of Gov. Harris be raised a regiment of infantry in 1861, and with it entered the service of Tennessee and the Confederate States. He was on duty through all the ardnous preliminaries of the first year of the war, and was severely and dangerously wounded at Shiloh, where he was conspicuous for gallantry. In 1864 he was ap-pointed Circuit Judge of the Trenton Circuit, an office which closed with the war between the States. Since that event he has been devoted to his Gen. John L. T. Sneed is known and so much beloved by the people of West Tennessee that it is with difficulty we can confine ourselves, at the late hour at which we write, to the employment of a moderatephraseology in the expression of what we know is the public estimate of him. He was born in Raleigh, N. C., the birth-place of Andrew Johnson, some fifty years ago, and drifted to the then far west when only fourcen years of age. He studied law in. and in his 21st year was elected from Shelby county to the Legislature where he served a full term. In 1851 he was cleeted Attorney-General of this district by the Legislature, and of the State in 1854 by the people, by a majority of six thousand. As a scholar he takes rank among the most eminent at the bar of the State, and is regarded as among the foremost criminal lawyers of Tennessee. The possession of these peculiarities of ttainment, admirably fit him for the position to which he has been nominated, and to which he will certainly be elected. No gentleman ever became a candilate in Tennessee whose personal virthes have won more devoted friends than those of Thomas A. R. Nelson. When the passions of war were aroused and Nelson lived in the midst of a lived i people thoroughly exasperated, and a district rent by incurable dissensions, he still pursued the even tenor of his way; and such was the love he inspired and such the profound respect for his intellect and personal virtues, that his integrity was never questioned; and while men fought one another, and East Tennessee was a seething auldron of demoniacal passions, Nelon cultivated his little farm and maintained an impoverished family by steady professional toil. His opinions underwent no change. When the war was over he had forgotten wrongs done by Northern or Southern enthusiasts, and like John Williams and others who had concurred with him, he sought to restore order and peace, and condemned in unmeasured terms the absurd vagaries and vio-lence of Brownlow and his adherents. The partisan history of Judge Deaderick is much the same with that of Mr. Nelson. Nelson is a poet, a dreamer, an enthusiast, while Mr. Deaderick has spent his whole life in he midst of musty tomes. He is a living impersonation of those faultless English expounders of common law, whose learning has defined popular rights through many centuries Of his personal history, we know nothing more than this, like Nelson, ie was a Whig, and when the war ended he shut out from memory the fact that it had ever occured. Mr. Nelson was educated at the East Tennessee University, and through all his life has been a laborious student. He is to-day, one of the most tasteful belles lettres scholars of the South, and has pronounced at the hustings and in Congress speeches of Taultless literary taste and elegance. The London Times, years ago, did Mr. Nelson the honor to publish one of his speeches delivered in Congress, and pronounced it the best specimen of forensic oratory that had emanated from the American Congress since John Randolph illustrated the perfection and purity of the English tongue. The contest of Mr. Nelson with the late Governor Jones for a seat in the Senate of the United States, when Nelson was beaten one vote. will not soon be forgotten by those who remember the earnestness and lofty, honorable spirit with which the conflict was conducted. Nelson's re-cital of the incidents of that wonderful contest, in glowing verses, has often been reproduced by the news-paper press. Hardly less remarkable have been the relations of Andrew Johnson and Nelson. They have col-lided often in years gone by, and

words were almost blows. Nelson, frail as he is in person, never faltered when the rude Red Republican Democrat, as Johnson then was, came glowering fariously and uttering anathemas such as crushed Gentry in fler vears. In private social life Tom Nelson kindly, generous to a fault, simple and confiding, full of tenderness. He is devoted and tireless in his friendships, and is only too credulous, ascribing virtues to others that are pe-culiar to himself. His name alone would make the ticket successful in East Tennessee, even if a common-place lawyer, instead of the accom-plished Judge Deaderick, were asso-ciated with him on the ticket.
